Flowers Make Sweet Juice

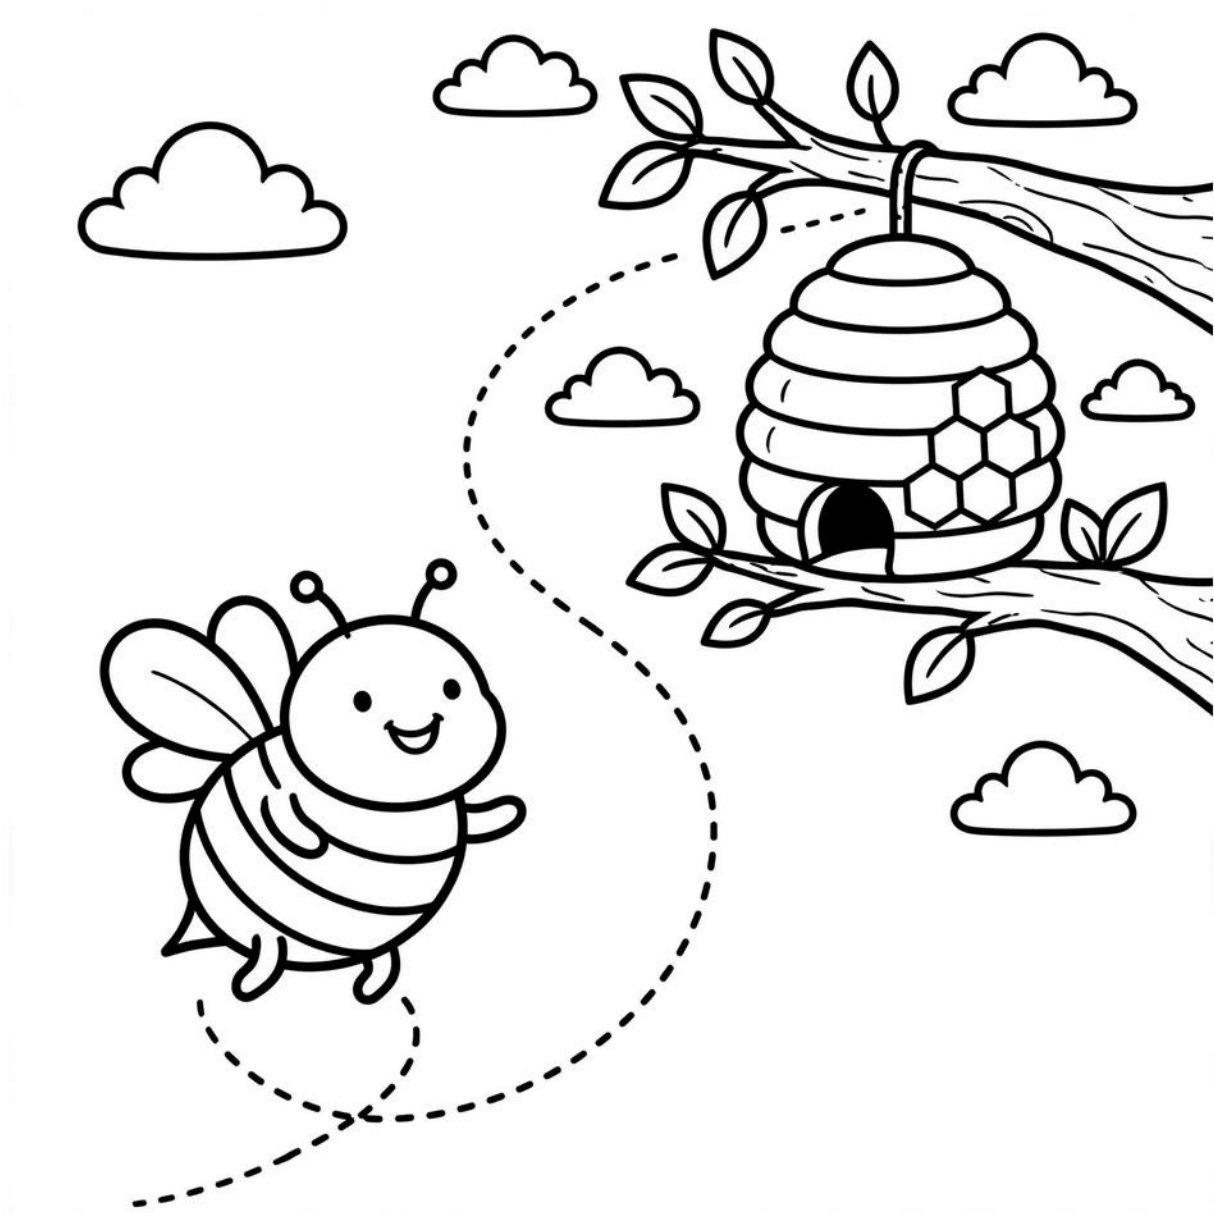

Flowers make a sweet juice called nectar to invite bees to visit.

Sip, Sip!

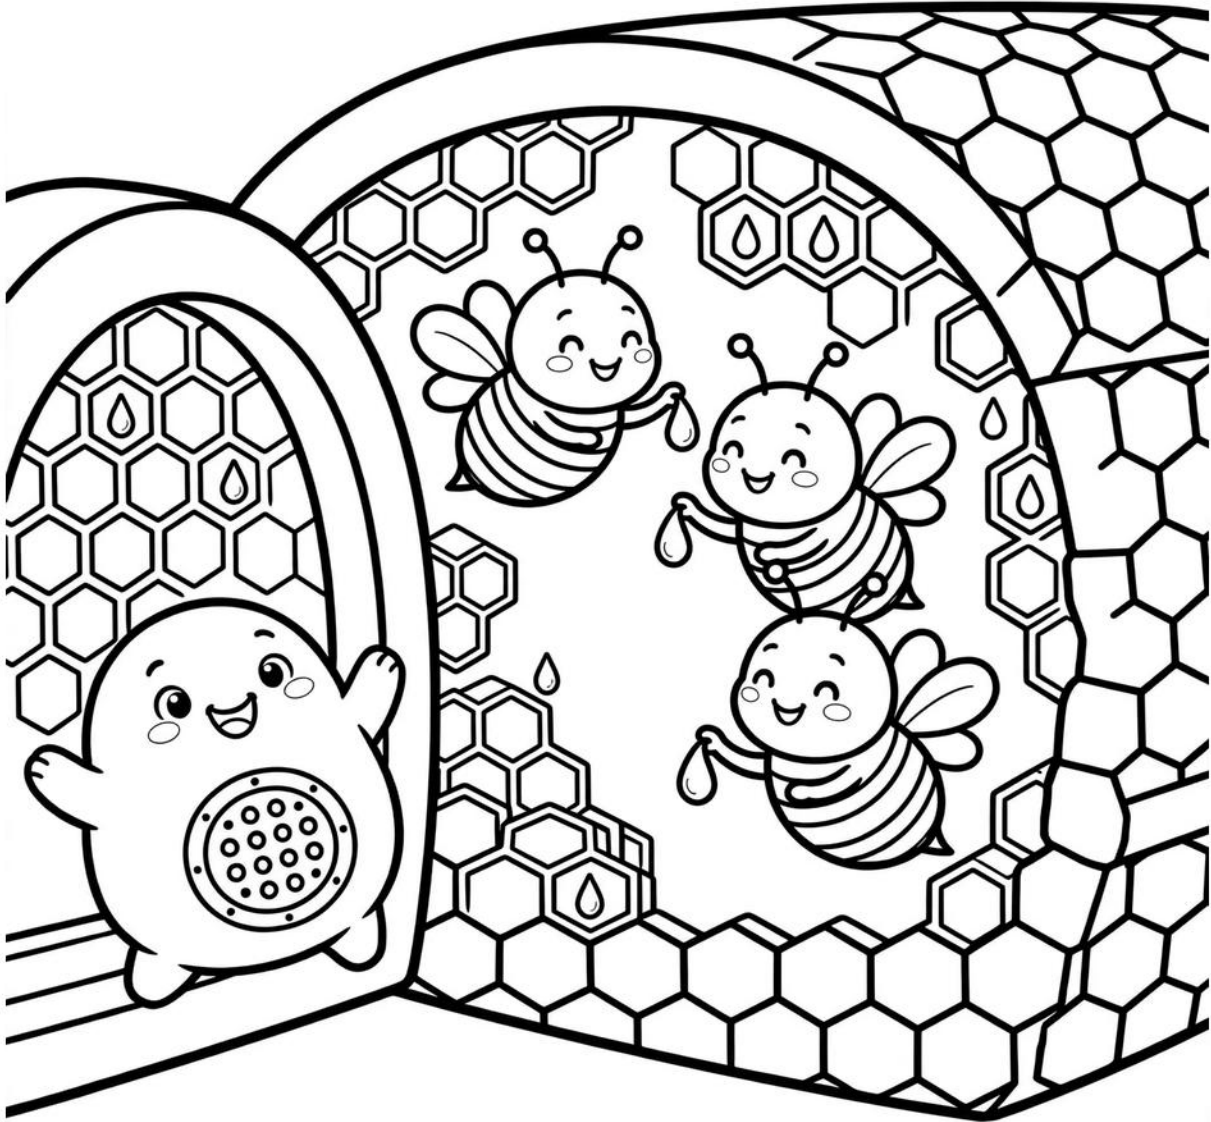

The bee sips the nectar up with its long tongue — slurp!

The Honey Tummy

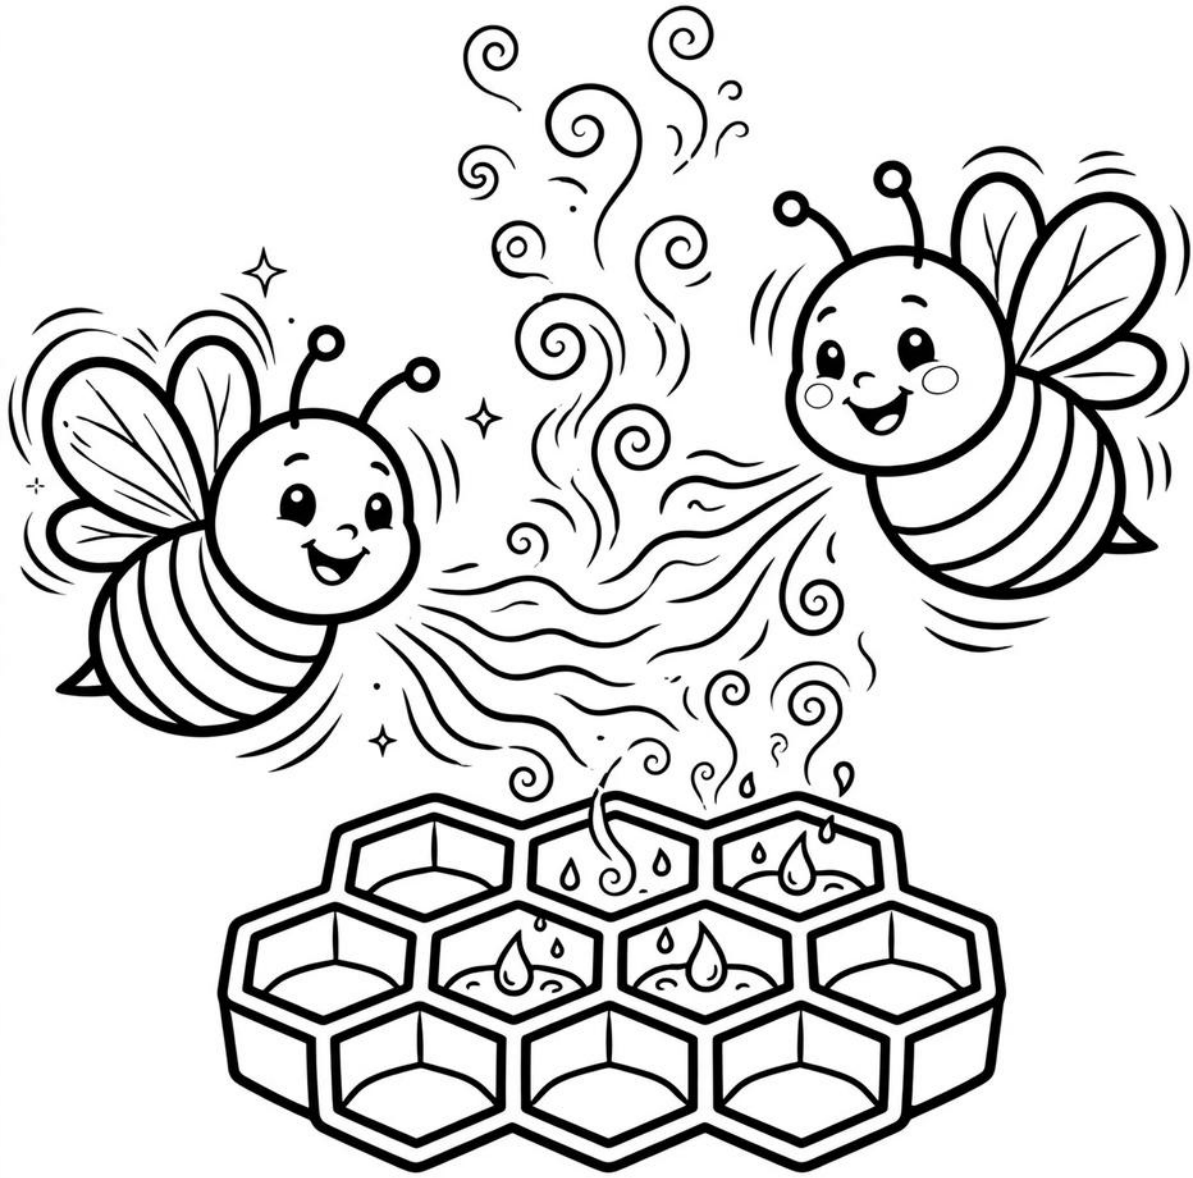

The bee carries the nectar home in a special honey tummy.

Sharing at the Hive

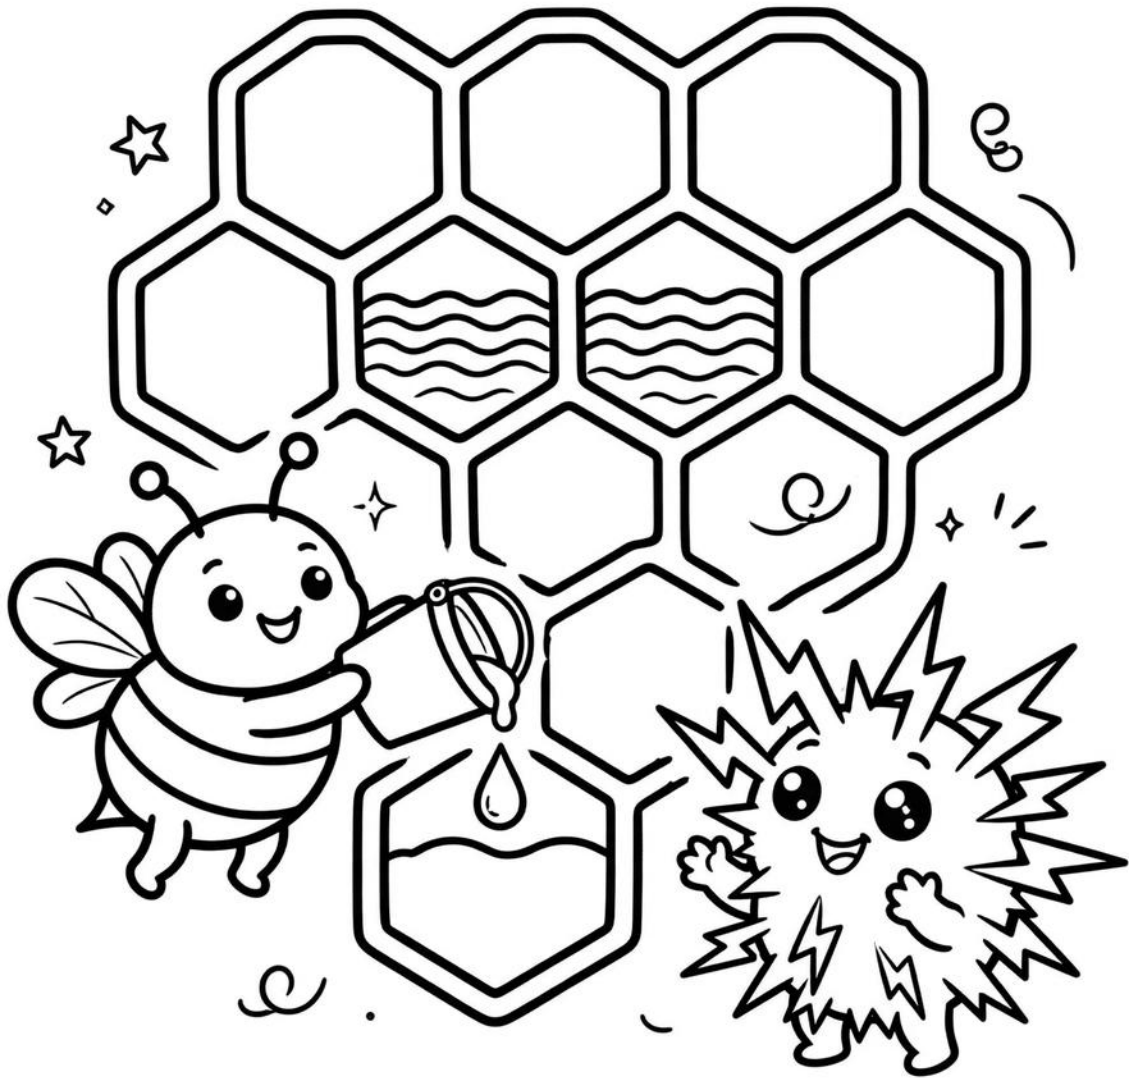

Back home, the bees share the nectar with each other, mouth to mouth.

Fan Those Wings!

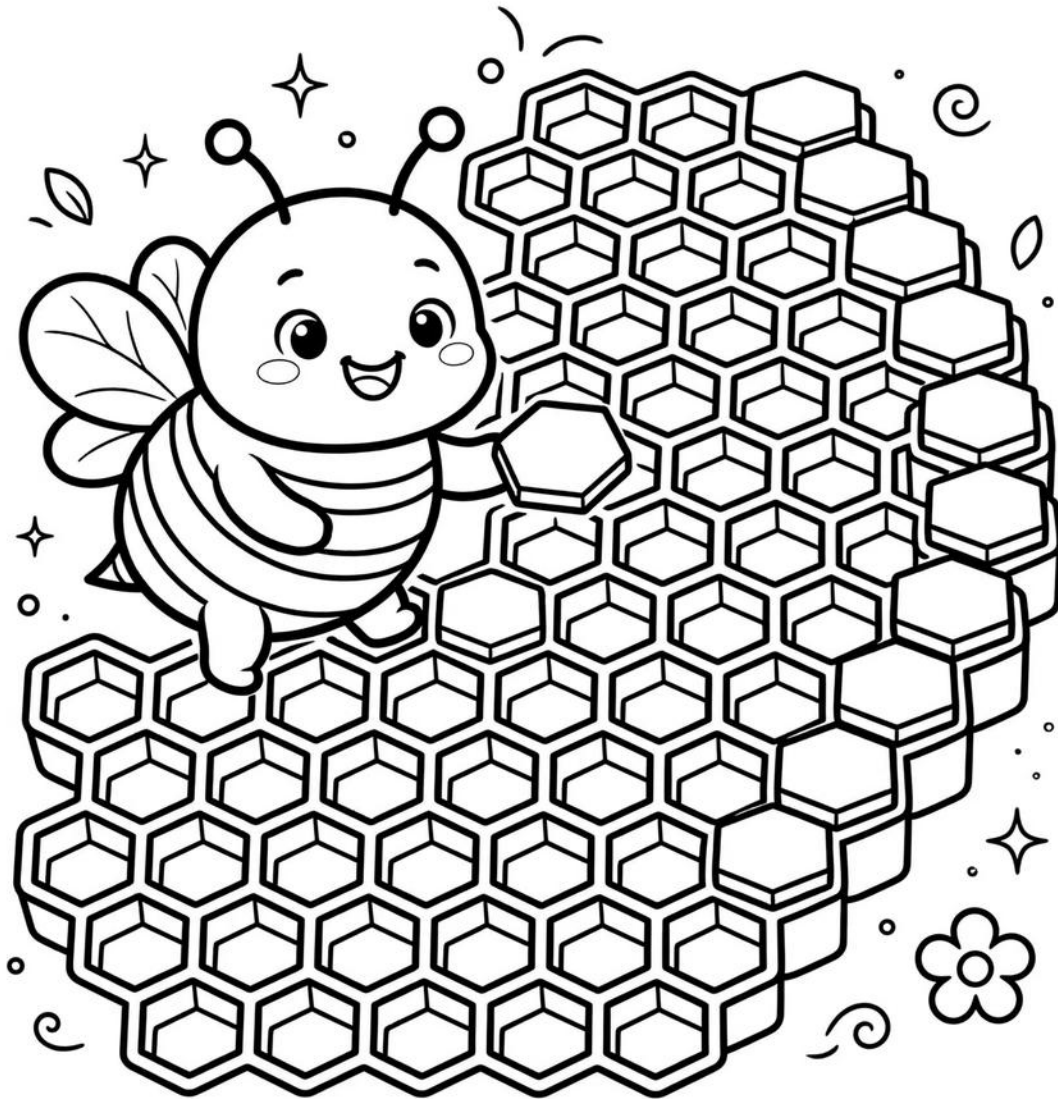

The bees fan their wings fast to blow the watery part away.

Into the Honeycomb

Thick golden honey gets tucked into six-sided honeycomb cells.

Sealed with Wax

Each full cell gets a wax lid, like a tiny lunchbox for later.

Saved for Winter

The hive saves its honey to munch on all winter long.

A Sweet Share

Beekeepers take a little honey and leave plenty for the bees. Sweet!
